

Kit Bond victorious in tight race for Senate

BY MIA MOORE
News Editor

Tuesday's elections brought the bombardment of negative campaigning between Republican Kit Bond and Democrat Harriett Woods to a close, giving Bond a U.S. Senate seat held by Democrats since 1950.

With more than 50 percent of the precincts reporting, Bond captured 502,099 votes. Woods secured 453,587 votes.

With the election of former Governor Bond to the Senate, Missouri will have two Republicans in the Senate for only the second time since the Civil War.

Bond described yesterday his campaign as being "as close to perfect as you can get." Bond is the only Republican nationwide to take over a seat given up by a Democrat, retiring Senator Thomas Eagleton.

Bond congratulated Woods for running a tough race.

"I know an awful lot of people got involved," Woods told reporters after realizing her defeat.

The campaign spending between Bond and Woods, is estimated to be $9 million—one of the most expensive battles in the state's history.

"It's been a long tough hard-fought campaign between two well-known strong candidates," Jody Newman, Woods' campaign manager, said. "I don't know if there's anything we could have done better."

Much of the campaigning was in the form of television advertisements.

The first commercial from

Woods' campaign concerned a farmer crying over the foreclosure of his land by a company Bond served as a member of the board of directors.

Woods would later tell voters that she was sorry that a "muddling" impression had been presented throughout the campaign.

One of Bond's recent ads told voters that Woods would trust the Soviet Union to stop weapons testing.

This ad drew particular criticism from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, from which part of an interview with Woods was highlighted in the commercial.

Bond's spokesmen couldn't factually support the charge in the commercial. Woods would later counter with her own commercial calling Bond's ad a lie.

Students visit Washington for meeting

BY MIA MOORE
News Editor

Nine members of the Mass Communications Department at the University are participating in the Associated Collegiate Press/College Advisers National Convention today.

The convention, which started today, will end on Sunday. This year's annual convention is being held in Washington, D.C.

"It's a good place to learn and grow for your publications," Laura Widmer, Tower yearbook adviser, said.

The convention will offer sessions on college newspapers, yearbooks and magazines.

"The big thing is there's going to be a press conference with President Reagan," Widmer said. She said that students will get to question President Reagan during the conference.

Other featured speakers include "Bloom County" cartoonist Berke Breathed and Elizabeth Dole, Secretary of Transportation.

Widmer and John Kerr, Northwest Missourian adviser are attending the convention along with seven students from the Northwest newspaper and yearbook publications.

Kirsten Knoll, Executive Editor, from the Northwest Missourian staff is representing the newspaper.

Mike Dunlap, a student majoring in English/Journalism, is also attending.

Widmer will be teaching sessions on creating theme development, putting ideas to work and staff organization.

The annual convention is usually attended by approximately 2,000 people, Widmer said. Copies of the Northwest Missourian and Tower publications will be on display with other colleges and universities across the United States.

Widmer said that the convention offers students and advisers the chance to meet their counterparts in other areas of the country and exchange experiences with them.

"I, personally, want to know more about the designs (and) the trends," Neighbors said. "And I want to learn more about developing a theme."

The Tower's theme this year is "Imagine That."

Issues of the University newspaper and yearbook will be critiqued by judges at the convention.

"I think that this offers student journalists an exceptional opportunity to hone their skills and become aware of current trends in both scholastic and professional journalism," Dunlap said.

Alpha Kappa Lambda's Dance Marathon for the Muscular Dystrophy Association last week helped earn $1,500 in pledges to fight the crippling disease.

The marathon dance, lasting 26 hours, had approximately 30 dancers, Tom Paulsen, president of AKL, said. Originally, 70 dancers had signed up to participate.

"AKL feels the Muscular Dystrophy Dance Marathon is a very worthwhile cause," Paulsen said. "Since we have been having this in the past, we feel we did a part in finding the gene that causes MD."

Researchers announced last month that they found the gene responsible for the most common form of muscular dystrophy, Duchenne muscular dystrophy.

Duchenne muscular dystrophy afflicts 20,000 to 50,000 American boys.

The Muscular Dystrophy Association provided much of the financial support for the research.

"There is no cure," Paulsen said, "but we're getting a lot closer."

Dancers were allowed 30 minute breaks every 6 hours. Fifteen minute breaks were given hourly. The marathon started at 6 p.m. on Oct. 31 and continued until 8 p.m. on Nov. 1.

"It was a thrilling time," Randy Sharp said. "If you weren't here, you cheated yourself."

Even though many of the dancers had participated throughout the night, they planned to go out after the marathon to dance some more.

"A lot of people stuck it out," Julie Holman, co-chairperson of the Dance Marathon, said. "They got tired, but they stuck it out."

Contestants who received the most in pledges were Kathleen Romero, $429.70; chemical and physical science professor Jim Smeltzer, $317; and Tami Haddox, $237.10.

"I loved it," Stephanie Dishon said. "It made me feel so good." Dishon said she participated in the dance marathon last year.

Besides the dance marathon, AKL also sponsored jello wrestling and a volleyball championship.

Jello wrestling winners were Jamie Snook, first place; Kathleen Loew, second place; Mary Talmadge, third place; and LeeAnn McDermott, fourth place. Winners received trophies.

The volleyball championship team was called The Pub. The team consisted of Connie Caloney, LeAnna Cashmere, Michelle Gaa, Kimbra Hurd and Holly Larson. The team received $40 and t-shirts for winning the competition.

Drug committee to inform campus

BY SARAH FRERKING
For the Missourian

Educating and informing students about drug abuse is one of the many tasks the new drug awareness committee faces.

The committee was formed recently in response to federal pressure that requires colleges to have an active campus-wide substance awareness program.

The committee was appointed by Dr. John Mees, vice president of administrative and student affairs.

The program is headed by Dr. Bill Dizney, acting director of admissions and financial aid.

Dizney plans to use posters, newspaper articles and pamphlets as part of the effort to "educate the students without rubbing their nose in the drug problem."

"Students want to know more about drugs, but don't want to be hassled," Dizney said. "We want them to know that the information is there for them."

He said that students living off campus may face the greatest danger in receiving help.

"They might be the ones who need the most help, but because they aren't in touch with campus life, they may fail to receive it," Dizney said.

Dizney intends for the program to establish a list of students for a peer counseling program on drugs.

"It's important that kids know they can talk to someone confidentially," he said.

Measles immunizations required

BY BRET BAILEY
Staff Writer

Students who have not yet had their measles immunization shots will not be disenrolled, Dr. Desmond Dizney, director of student health services, said.

The immunization shots, given to prevent the infection and spreading of the disease, are required for students in order to attend the University.

"No one is in a situation where they will be disenrolled if the shots aren't up to date," Dizney said.

Earlier this year, a measles outbreak on many college campuses caused concern. Students at stricken campuses were quarantined to the universities' premises.

The outbreak did not reach Northwest.

Dizney said that students are being referred to the Nodaway County Health Center to receive their immunization shots. Both the Nodaway County Health Center and Dizney report that there has not been any outbreaks of measles or other diseases at Northwest.

The Nodaway County Health Center reported between 150 and 200 students have come to the center in October for the measles immunization shots.

The immunization process has been hampered because of a shortage of the vaccination, which was used during the September floods across the Midwest to help the sick and injured, Dizney said.

People born between 1957 and 1968 are the group most likely to catch the disease, Dizney said. This group was immunized against measles with a "killed virus" shot. This shot was intended to kill the virus and prevent the disease.

Instead, the shot was weak and was unable to prevent any further illness.

People born after 1968 were immunized with a "live virus" shot, which weakens the virus, Dizney said.

She said that the patients' reactions to the immunization shot have been good. The antibodies are weakened to the point that they are unable to form further diseases.

"At this point, we believe it will take only one immunization," she said. "It will last a lifetime."

Dizney said she felt students have been responsible in getting their immunization shots, including rubella shots, updated.

"We have had many (students) come in," Dizney said.

Campus Safety halts evacuation procedures

BY BRET BAILEY
Staff Writer

Students will no longer be evacuated from buildings and residence halls during bomb threats unless there is sufficient evidence of a threat, Campus Safety announced this week.

The announcement came after a meeting between Wilbur Adams, director of campus services; Bruce Wake, director of housing; and Dr. John Mees, vice president of administrative and student affairs.

"The meeting last week made the decision to not evacuate," Adams said. Only when sufficient evidence of a bomb is found, during a search of the building, will there be an evacuation, he said.

The decision follows a wave of bomb threats—12 in all—that have been reported since Sept. 23.

The latest bomb threat was reported at Phillips Hall on Monday. The building was searched and no bombs were found. Residents were not evacuated.

The three University officials agreed that the bomb threats are seen as a prank in most cases. Mees said that when the Daily Forum published a story about a bomb threat at the University, a series of bomb threats were subsequently reported to Campus Safety.

"We have found that evacuation seems to be what (the culprits) want," Adams said. "The more we evacuate, the more they called in."

Adams said that when there is a bomb threat, Campus Safety will notify the hall director for residence halls and building director for academic buildings. The premises, including closets and laundry rooms in residence halls, will be searched for bombs.

If a bomb or an object that looks like a bomb is located, the building will then be evacuated, Adams said.

"If we find something that could be a bomb, only we're not sure, then we will evacuate the building," Adams said.

Adams stated he doubted that students would have a bomb and use it to threaten lives.

"We don't know who they are," he said. "They can be very capable." He added that if the culprit intended to hurt people, the bomb would be placed somewhere where a lot of people will be at one time.

Adams said several bomb squads were consulted before deciding not to evacuate the buildings.

"A lot of them recommend that you do not evacuate," Adams said. "Then you have a bigger chance of getting more people hurt."

Adams said that no suspects have been found in the 12 bomb threat cases this semester.

"We've never caught anyone," he said. "We don't even have a suspect."

Books on Vietnam given to library

MARYVILLE, Mo.—More than 750 books on the Vietnam War have been donated to the Owens Library by the Friends of the University Library at Northwest.

Friends of the University Library President Dr. Robert Foster, University president emeritus, said that the books had been purchased from a private collector.

Foster, who served as University president from 1984 until his retirement in 1977, said the collection will provide useful resource material in many academic areas, including science, history, political science, speech, and English composition.

Location changed for pictures

MARYVILLE, Mo.—Tower yearbook group pictures will be taken in the Ballroom of the Student Union instead of the earlier reported location of the Charles Johnson Theater in the Fine Arts Building.

The group pictures will be taken between 4 and 10 p.m. on Nov. 10-14.

Signs added to campus roadways

MARYVILLE, Mo.—Three new stop signs have been placed on the Northwest campus.

Two new stop signs have been placed on the campus portion of Ninth Street. One sign is located east of the Thompson-Ringold Building. The second sign is just north of the Biomass Research Center.

The third new stop sign is on Northwest Drive to the north of the Administration Building and south of where west-bound Ninth Street traffic enters Northwest Drive.

Steve Easton, associate director of environmental services, said the signs are designed to protect pedestrian and vehicular traffic at those points.

Graduate places first in contest

MARYVILLE, Mo.—Traci Tornquist, a 1986 vocal music graduate of Northwest, won first place in the Nebraska National Association of Teachers of Singing (NATS) competition held Oct. 25 in Omaha, Kan.

Tornquist competed against all voice types in the graduate level division.

She is pursuing a master's degree in voice performance at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Reagan approves higher education funding

COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

After two years of debate, promises of wholesale changes and pointed insults flung between Congress and the White House, President Reagan last week signed the Higher Education Reauthorization Act of 1986.

The all-important act sets most federal college policies for the next five years.

College lobbyists, who sat with the legislation since Congress and the Reagan administration swore to make it work fundamental changes in the ways students go to college, are generally pleased with the result.

"This HEA (Higher Education Act) suits us just fine," Julianne Still Thrift of the National Institute of Independent College and Universities said.

Thrift and others in the education association community in Washington are relieved the final act didn't include any substantial cuts in federal funding or federal student aid.

"Although education has always been a favorite thing for the president to recommend slashing, Congress hasn't gone along with him on it," Tom Wolanin, an aide to the House Postsecondary Education Committee, said. Wolanin was a primary player in pushing the bill through Congress.

Last year, Education Secretary William Bennett said he wanted to use the process of passing a new HEA—a new one comes up every five years—as an opportunity for a philosophical debate about what role the federal government should play in colleges, what responsibilities parents have for paying for their children's education, what efforts colleges should make to insure that aid recipients are making academic progress and are of good character, and other issues.

A number of lobbyists took Bennett's announcement to mean the administration would ask for deep cuts in student aid programs, and make it harder for students to qualify for the aid.

No such thing happened. Bennett never gave Congress a comprehensive list of reforms he wanted, and Congress proceeded to approve of several modest increases for most student aid programs without him.

"I can say student financial aid survived the reauthorization process," Bob Evans, aid director at Penn State and president of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators, said.

Evans stated the new act does change some of the programs. Students, for example, will have to fill out longer, more complicated aid applications.

Students will, moreover, be able to get less aid in the form of grants, and will have to repay most of their student aid after they leave college.

Thanks to some technical changes, some banks may stop making Guaranteed Student Loans, and the ones that continue to make GSLs will charge students more.

Students now also must have at least a "C" cumulative grade point average by the end of their sophomore years to be able to get aid.

"I do not suspect a substantial number of students will be knocked out of school as a result (of the new grade requirement)," Evans said. "While it appears to be a new thing, all it really is is an extra bite. Students have always had to meet certain grade requirements."

Though the new law "authorizes" Congress to appropriate more money for aid programs, the government will decide each year how much it really gives to the programs.

Congress never did appropriate as much money to aid programs as the Higher Education Act of 1980 allowed.

Wolanin, for one, is "confident that the amount of money will be at least at the level it is now. (But) there is no way I can predict if more will be available (through the HEA's lifespan)."

College lobbyists remain uneasy, however.

"We are finding ourselves talking money again and again," Thrift said. "We've been put on the defensive, and will continue to be."

Wynette cancels...

Louise Mandrell to perform next week

BY CINDY RATHKE
Staff Writer

Louise Mandrell, country and western music singer and television personality, will perform in the place of Tammy Wynette at Northwest on Nov. 14.

Wynette, a country and western singer, cancelled her current national tour earlier this week after collapsing on stage during a performance in Los Angeles.

Wynette was admitted into the Betty Ford Drug and Alcohol Treatment Center for her addiction to a prescription drug.

Mandrell will perform at 7:30 p.m. and at 9:30 p.m. in the Mary Linn Performing Arts Center.

Tickets purchased for the Wynette concerts will be honored at the Mandrell appearances. Any ticketholders who want refunds should contact the Union Office of the Mary Linn Box Office before Nov. 10.

Ticket prices at $3 for students and $5 for the public. Tickets are being sold at the Union Office and the Mary Linn Box Office.

"We anticipate about the same results of ticket sales for Mandrell, as we did for Wynette," Lee Krokstrum, adviser of the Campus Activities Program, said.

The number of tickets being refunded by late Wednesday were equal to the number of tickets being sold for the Mandrell concerts.

"I don't believe the change will affect whether or not the students will attend," Krokstrum said.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Advice provided for review writing

Dear Editor,

The following is in response to the review of "The Imaginary Invalid" that appeared in the Oct. 23 Missourian. The satirical nature of this piece is intended to bring higher awareness to student journalists and editors of the need for personal knowledge of subjects in critical reviews.

It was an enjoyable relaxing afternoon of entertainment. The readers seemed intent upon reading a review of the Northwest Theatre Department's production of "The Imaginary Invalid."

The scene begins in the Oct. 23 issue of the Missourian, at the home of Miss Malaprop, a 20th-century reviewer. Malaprop, played by Julie Ernat, sifts through clichés, nonsense phrases and sentence fragments while arguing with her maid, English Grammar. The main topic of disagreement between Malaprop and Grammar was the relationship between Malaprop's stepdaughter, Tact, and her love affair with a young man, Theatrical Knowledge.

Ernat did an excellent job of convincing the reader that she actually tried to understand the lovers' plight. She rambled and raved like a writer fascinated with reviews. During the whole review her angle was bent.

Grammar was cute like a language should be, but could not persuade her mistress to take full advantage of her services. And as Tact and Theatrical Knowledge were unseen characters, Grammar could not convince Malaprop to let them carry on with their plans. Other characters seen in the review were too fat, boring or ugly to mention.

The setting was particularly interesting. The review was a perfectly reconstructed replica of what a 20th-century review would look like.

The readers enjoyed themselves immensely. Everyone realized Malaprop's folly, as deliciously presented by Julie Ernat. Such a cleverly researched character will not soon be forgotten!

The ONLY purpose of this piece is to urge people to think before they write and to edit judiciously when they are to be read by any size of an audience. Knowledge and taste must not be overlooked.

Sincerely,
Charles M. Duer

Hall socializing makes getting to classes hard

BY RUSTON PRUETT
Staff Writer

Some students at Northwest have the strangest class schedules. As soon as one class ends, another begins—and in a different building. They have 10 minutes to cross the campus, battle the weather, deal with hallway traffic and get to class on time.

No one understands when they're late. But all the class turns and judges them as they enter; some suggest that they try to develop a Time-Management program.

It's time for a Wheaties Breakfast! The problem is the 10 minutes 'til traffic, bodies and books, in Colden Hall. It seems that all students (more than 4,200) have classes in this building, Colden Hall. This is not so much of a problem, but—

During a change of classes many students will loiter about in the halls, standing tall and being pretty. "There is nothing else to do," they'll say. "Class don't (excuse the English) begin for another five minutes or so."

There are important things that still need to be said.

"Christy, what did you do to your hair? It is so lovely! That perm—where was it that it happened?—just fits your face so well."

"Oh," Christy smiles, "I just had them do it a little. It used to be naturally curly," she adds, sticking her fingers in it. "Do you really think it looks nice? I didn't even think anyone would notice."

Yeah, right! And the emperor has got no clothes. It wouldn't be so bad if she'd bathed or brushed her teeth. But Christy holds court—she's Queen for a Day—and students that can't get around her are trapped by the smell of her hair.

And then there is Butch who went down to Kansas City and got wild and drunk, crazy. "You should have seen me, ha-ha (he's a really funny guy), I didn't know what I was doing or nothin'!" He's the kind of guy that you don't introduce to family.

And there are those that just stand out in the hall and look. They'll yawn, look at their books, ask about the time and say hello to friends. It's kind of like high school, if you remember. They tell Christy that her hair looks nice.

Most of these idle thinkers enjoy Simple Minds and wear Reebok tennis shoes. Bruce Springsteen is the 'boss'; they'll be glad when summer is here so they can go swimming and they watch "Miami Vice." They can act, of course, but really want to direct.

"I wish the Beatles would get back together." It kind of makes you wish you'd never left the womb.

And there must be something holy about lounging in front of a class door, any class door. It's really not so holy, though. There's a better place to enjoy freedoms and exchange gossip. And that better place is somewhere else.

The halls in Colden are like the Santa Monica Freeway. Traffic is slow—there might have been an accident—and you wish you'd stayed on the boulevards. Or the ground is wet with rain, and you can't seed acreage on the south side. It's just a little too bad.

"I didn't even think anyone would notice."

It might be better if classes were scheduled in between half-hour breaks. Twenty minutes? Fifteen?

Students want weekend mail

BY TODD SPITZMILLER
For the Missourian

Saturday mail is a waiting at the Maryville Post Office, but the cost of delivery is causing its delay.

The University feels that mail on Saturday will cost the college too much for that extra day of mail. That extra day for mail for most people will be a bright spark or a pick-me-up for the rest of the week.

Bill Adams, the Maryville postmaster, said mail is ready for the students on Saturday, but the University will not pay the extra costs to have the students' mail sorted and delivered. The mail on Saturday doesn't cost the college more to be delivered, it's the cost of hiring someone to sort the mail and place it in the students' boxes.

The University mailroom is not where the mail comes through to be delivered to the dorms.

"The misunderstanding here is that this is a 'teachers' mailroom' and it has no association with the mail to the dormitories," Russ Riley, postmaster of the University mailroom, said. "We provide a service to send mail out and to purchase stamps, but nothing from the Maryville Post Office deals with us directly."

Bomb threats, fire alarms continue to irritate

BY VERNON DRAVENSTOTT
For the Missourian

When will it finally stop? Once again a few Northwest Missouri State University students thought it would be funny to pull the fire alarms in the dorms as a practical joke.

Wilbur Adams, director of Campus Safety, said, "This is a problem every semester, but it seems to be worse in the fall due to the influx of freshmen entering the campus."

Campus Safety has had their hands full dealing with the problems of false alarms.

"The best way to stop this tomfoolery is for the students of Northwest to turn in the pranksters," Adams said.

One step in the right direction in solving these incidents was the arrest of a 19-year-old student in connection with the false alarm pulled in Phillips Hall on Oct. 3.

Campus Safety says punishment can vary from one day to six months in jail, in addition to a fine of from $1 to $500.

Threats such as these can cause many problems to the students here at Northwest. A clear example of this occurred in the incident at Millikan Hall, when a young girl who was fleeing from the dorm fell and broke her leg.

"It's not fair for the people who had nothing to do with pulling the alarms to get hurt," Adams said.

The fire alarms are equipped with an ink that sprays out as the alarm switch is depressed. This ink also possesses the characteristic of getting darker as someone attempts to wash it off.

Greg Gieb, the resident assistant who helped apprehend the suspect in the Phillips Hall incident, said the man had ink on his hands and shirt. After a questioning period with the suspect, he finally admitted to the prank.

Campus Safety officials also reported that the suspect was intoxicated at the time of questioning.

Adams voiced a great deal of concern when he stated, "We (Campus Safety) just do not have the manpower to patrol all the dorms, that's why we need the students' help."

Students may start becoming wise to the pranks and may decide not to evacuate the building. This could cause a disaster of major proportions.

Campus Safety feels that until the students start reporting these acts of vandalism, their hands are tied.

Senior given high honor for cheering

BY MICHELLE CAMPBELL
Staff Writer

October 25 was more than just the final game for one cheerleader. Linda Carnes, a senior cheerleader for Northwest, was presented a plaque and certificate in recognition of her selection to the National Cheerleading Association's First Team All-American Collegiate Cheerleaders Squad for 1986-87.

Carnes, who served as captain of Northwest's cheerleading squad, was selected from over 2500 cheerleaders representing more than 300 colleges and universities in the United States. Cheerleaders were evaluated at NCA cheerleading camps throughout the summer. The Northwest squad attended camp in Lincoln, Neb., in August.

"Cheerleaders were chosen on the basis of their technical skills as well as their leadership abilities within the squad," said Nancy Hanks, Northwest cheerleading sponsor. "Linda's athletic ability is fantastic, in addition to her enthusiasm and leadership. This is the second time she's received the All-American award. She's been quite an asset to the squad."

Carnes, a Kansas City native, had never cheered until her sophomore year at Northwest. "I tried out for cheerleading because I knew how to tumble," she said. "I didn't know what all it involved, but one of my friends on the squad got me interested."

"I love cheering," she adds. "I'm a hyper person, and cheering enables me to use that."

Carnes will graduate in December with a major in psychology and minors in biology and physical education. She hopes to begin a career in corporate fitness.

Students spend break at home

JOHN PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

Winter will soon be upon us and many students are already making plans to retreat to warmer climates during Christmas and Spring break.

Trips to California, Texas and the traditional college break town, Daytona Beach, are being contemplated. There is even a cruise to Nassau, Bahamas in the works for Northwest students at Spring break.

Most students tend to flock to places where "everybody else" is going. However, a few are planning trips to more out-of-the-way places to avoid crowds.

Spring break is traditionally the time for students to go on trips. Christmas, on the other hand, is reserved for family—a time to be home for the holidays.

Also, college students often simply can't afford to take pleasure trips. Most of their money must be saved to pay for school. Many take advantage of Christmas break to earn extra money.

Travel plans for students reflect this fact.

"Most of the flights for Christmas break are for home," Karen Pfost of the Maryville Travel Agency said. "It's getting a little late to be planning a trip for Christmas now anyway. The cheapest flights usually have to be booked 30 days in advance."

Pfost stressed that booking through an agency is the cheapest way to go.

"It doesn't cost the traveler any more, and we have access to all of the airlines and have lists of all the prices so you can get the cheapest rate," she said.

Spring break is traditionally the time for students to go on trips.

Airline fares are the lowest they have been for several years now. For example, a round trip ticket to Los Angeles, booked in advance, costs between $138 and $150.

The price of airline tickets also depends on what day you want to travel and from what city you are flying from.

"Flights are cheapest on Tuesdays and Wednesdays—these are slower days for airlines," Pfost said.

"Also, most flights are less flying out of KCI (Kansas City International) than those leaving from Omaha or Des Moines. However, if one of those cities is cheaper, we can book you there."

There are other ways of saving on flights as well. A "Super Saver" package to Daytona Beach, Fla. can be as cheap as $158 round trip. However, since this is one of the most popular destinations, many stipulations apply. To qualify for this rate, you must fly both there and back on either a Tuesday or Wednesday, stay no longer than 21 days and be booked in by Nov. 13.

Extra costs may be added also, such as the price of a bus ticket to get from Maryville to the airport. However, this may be a problem if bus service to Maryville is discontinued.

"Students need the bus to get to the airport so they can make their flights," Pfost said.

Most bus tickets are purchased directly at the bus station and not through travel agents, however.

Experiments with jazz on new Shriekback LP

BY JOHN PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

Within the realm of alternative rock, there are several bands whose albums consistently rule the college charts, and receive the most airplay.

Groups like R.E.M., U2, the Talking Heads and the Cure are a few examples. Fans hungrily await the release of their new albums, and travel for miles to see them perform.

There are also a few bands who are on the brink of this kind of "underground stardom." Shriekback is one of these bands.

Their fifth album, "Big Night Music," may catapult them into this area, or it may alienate the fans they already have.

This is because "Big Night Music" is somewhat of a departure from the style used in their earlier records.

While most of the songs still employ a driving, hypnotic baseline, they now have a jazzy sound, because of an added horn section.

Because of this, some listeners may feel that Shriekback is selling out to the pop music market. Thinking that would be a mistake.

Why? Because it is the artful and mysterious lyrics that set this band apart from the others.

The songs follow a continued theme of night and darkness. Some songs evoke visions of midnight missions and shady characters, while others are sentimental, even corny tunes playing up the romance of moonlight.

The album's liner notes reinforce the mystery and darkness theme.

Shriekback says, "Big Night Music" is about "two different kinds of nights...nights of heat and weirdness...in which we would not send our dogs—wild sea and wet forest and eyes and teeth—or those other nights—fragrant with blossom, incandescent with moonlight and dreams, possessed by a cool beauty which evaporates with the dew."

It is poetic visions like this one that gathered the semi-cult following that Shriekback enjoys.

The liner notes are also used to inform us of the band's intentions. They have "opted to make a different kind of music—one which exalts human frailty and the harmonious mess of nature over the simplistic reductions of our crude computers." Shriekback totally refrains from the use of drum machines or digital synthesizers of any kind to address these beliefs.

Lyrics written in other languages are also added to some of the songs, while a few lyrics are plain gibberish. However, even though you don't know quite what they're saying, you feel as if it is must be very important and meaningful.

One of the album's standout tracks is "Running on the Rocks." It is a rocking tune with thumping bass and a blasting brass section.

The music fits perfectly with the swashbuckling lyrics, which talk of "sailing into the eyes of hurricanes" and "Searching the wide ocean with hooks and spears." All of this contrasts Barry Andrews crooning, seductive vocals, which are employed in every track.

Andrews' voice is most effective in "Gunning for the Buddha," a song with a soothing sound, but a definitely more disturbing inner meaning. They casually sing, "We're on the road and we're gunning for the Buddha... It would take one shot—to blow him away..."

If the album has any glaring faults, it would be that the best songs seem to be grouped on the first side.

Also, the schmaltzy "Exquisite," which sounds like something you would hear at your grandparent's 50th anniversary party, could have been left out. However, Shriekback shows a wry sense of humor about the song by crediting the backing singers with "Star-trek vocals."

"Big Night Music's" pluses far outweigh its minuses, though. The lack of computer gimmicks and the use of every instrument from clapperboards to castanets are refreshing in this high-tech world. While "Big Night Music" may disappoint some of Shriekback's old fans, its accessibility will make it their best selling album.

Jazz ensemble to perform

Musical variety show's theme

BY JULIE ERNAT
Staff Writer

Blues, swing, dixie, funk and more will be played at the Northwest's Jazz Ensemble concert Nov. 16 at 8 p.m. in the Mary Linn Performing Arts Center.

"I try to have a little bit of each style," Gordon Vernick, music instructor, said. "We're running a full gamut from rock to swing. We're playing ballads and latin pieces."

One of the selections to be performed will be "Return of the Diver" by Matt Harris, a top jazz pianist. Vernick describes the piece as funk, or a combination of jazz and rock.

The group will also perform three slow jazz ballads. The piece "Nicole" will feature a trumpet solo by member Scott Susich. The piece "Samantha" will feature a saxophone solo by member David DeCamp.

Finally, the third ballad, called "My One and Only Love," will feature a trumpet solo by Vernick himself.

Most of Vernick's players this year are freshmen. "Out of a group of 20 members at least 75 percent are new," he said. However, according to Vernick, the group has a lot of raw talent.

Vernick has high expectations. He hopes the jazz ensemble will help bring notoriety to the university and create more campus awareness about the ensemble.

"They're playing very ambitious, professional-level arrangements," Vernick said. "They've been able to master them."

However, the group started out on much easier pieces at the beginning of the year.

"The rock style is definitely the easiest to master," Vernick said. Gradually the pieces became more difficult.

"Swing is the most difficult to master," he said. "They have to work on it more."

The players are now working on the musical blending and "time feel," which consists of the players keeping the same basic rhythm and beat, even though they are playing different pieces at the same time.

Spikers set for season's end

BY KEN DEVANNEY
Staff Writer

The Bearkitten volleyball squad conclude their 1986 season with the MIAA post-season championship tournament this Friday and Saturday in St. Louis. The end of the season can be compared to taking a pain killer, Northwest will finally be put out of its misery.

"It's been a tough season for everyone," Coach Cathie Schulte said. "It's been very disappointing, although we played some very tough teams. I thought we would do a little better."

The 'Kittens spent last weekend participating in the University of Nebraska-Omaha Invitational and saw their overall record slip to 11-26, after an 0-6 performance.

Play began Friday with Northwest opening the tournament with a 15-9, 18-16 loss to North Dakota State. Nance Pfeifler led Northwest with five kills and three assists.

The 'Kittens then dropped a 15-6, 15-1 decision to host, and top-ten ranked, Nebraska-Omaha. Jill Tallman's five blocks, three of which were solo, and three kills led the Bearkitten effort.

Saturday proved to be no more successful for Northwest as the 'Kittens began the long day with a 15-9, 15-3 defeat at the hands of Northern Colorado. It was then Minnesota-Duluth's turn as they finished off the 'Kittens by scores of 15-5 and 15-4. The tournament's other Minnesota entry, St. Cloud State, then defeated Northwest 15-2, 15-6. Statistical leaders for the 'Kittens were Kathy Webb with seven kills, Michelle Stouffl with four kills and Nancy Pfeifler with eight assists.

The Bearkittens finished tournament play with a 15-0, 15-8 loss to MIAA rival Central Missouri State University. Jodi Brady and Kathy Webb each had three kills in a losing effort, while Pfeifler again pumped out a team-high six assists.

The last 'Kitten win was on Oct. 18 against Southeast Missouri State University. The 'Kittens won it at the Metro State Invitational in Denver. Coach Schulte's squad will have a chance to defeat Southeast again while at the same time avenging their most recent loss to Central last weekend.

"I just want to see us play good volleyball," Schulte said. "We're pretty confident about our first opponent (Lincoln University), then we would play Southeast, so we feel we have a good chance of being in the final game against Central Missouri."

The winner of the MIAA tournament does not receive an automatic bid to post-season play.

Battle of cellar teams upcoming

The pinnacle of the Bearcat's 1986 football season may very well be this Saturday when Northwest travels to Jefferson City to take on the Blue Tigers of Lincoln University.

In what has been nothing short of a frustrating season for Head Coach Vern Thomsen and his squad, the Bearcats have lost players to academic ineligibility and injury, they have lost games in the final seconds, and they have stumbled around the cellar of the MIAA conference.

That could change this weekend because Lincoln's season has mirrored that of Northwest's. The problems at Lincoln began when the curators of the school found they had gone well over their allotted budget. The problems have carried over into their athletic program.

First-year coach Jack Freeman has guided his team to a 1-8 record, same as the Bearcats. But even those numbers are misleading because the Blue Tiger's only win came on a forfeit.

The Bearcats are not looking past Lincoln, the last time they did that they were handed a disappointing loss.

"We can't put anybody down with our record," free safety Jody Rodgers said. "When we went into Wisconsin, we played a Division III team (University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point), and we kind of looked down on them...you see what happened!"

Lincoln has only been able to muster 14.4 yards a game on the ground this year. Keith Jackson is the Tiger's leading rusher with 179 yards on the year. Latrelle Watson is next with 178 yards.

The Blue Tigers are led on offense by quarterback Steve Bohlken, who has thrown for 471 yards and two touchdowns. No, not last week, but for the entire season.

Last weekend, the Tigers hosted the league's leader Central Missouri State University, and the Mules waltzed to a 56-9 victory. Most games this year involving Lincoln have had similar scores.

Coach Thomsen is optimistic, but cautious. "We're going down there and it's going to be like a hornet's nest," Thomsen said. "They (Lincoln) think they can get out of the cellar and they're going to be ready for us."

Kickoff is set for 1:30 p.m., at Dwight Reed Stadium on the Lincoln University campus.

Runners out to prove finish was not typical

This weekend's cross country regional races will provide a test for both Northwest squads. For the men, it will offer the opportunity for redemption after their last-place finish in the conference meet on Oct. 25.

For the women, regionals will offer the test to keep up with a so far impressive season.

"The 'Kitten squad is looking excellent," Cross Country Coach Richard Alsop said. "Their main weakness has been with their fifth and sixth-place runners."

Alsop has been pleased with the 'Kittens first four runners, Lisa Basich, Cherie King, Julie Carl and Rita Wagner.

At the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association conference meet, the 'Kittens finished in fourth-place. But the 'Cats fifth-place finish has Alsop viewing regionals as a chance for the squad to redeem themselves.

"The men had a sub-par performance at the conference meet," Alsop said. "The whole team is healthy this time."

Mark VanSickle, one of the 'Cats top four runners, was unable to finish the race due to an injury.

Both squads will be shooting for a chance to advance on to the NCAA Division II Championships which are slated to get underway at Riverside, Calif. on Nov. 22.

Alsop believes that both Northwest squads are capable of finishing in fourth or fifth-place in team standings. Alsop also sees Southeast, last year's winners in the men's division, providing the top squads this season.

Schools will be participating from seven different states.

"This week I've tried to get the squads together by practicing together," Alsop said. "Right now, we are as sharp as we can be...the women will be going in with seven runners for the first time."

Sideline

The Bearcat basketball squad was picked to finish second, and the Bearkitten basketball squad was picked to finish fourth in a pre-season poll submitted by coaches of the MIAA conference.

The Bearcat Junior Varsity football squad defeated North Iowa Community College by a score of 8-7 last Sunday. The victory improved the 'Cats record to 2-1.

Campus recreation honored three students as athletes of the week. Melissa Dyché was named women's athlete of the week, Bob Calaghan was named independent male athlete of the week, and Steve Yeary, a member of Delta Sigma Phi, was named fraternity athlete of the week.
